Description: Watercolor is an expressive, vibrant art form that has been present in the artistic community since the 15th century. In this class students will learn how to utilize and master this dynamic medium. We will cover everything from how to prepare your paper to overcoming common problems from basic washes to arranging scenes. In-class, students can expect an environment where constructive critique is melded with encouragement of their strengths. They will be assigned weekly homework to practice and hone their skills. Content of these assignments will include landscapes, still lives, people and will cumulate in a final project to exhibit their progress. I look forward to challenging and encouraging your students as we explore the realm of watercolor.
